Learning Without Limits - a Short Guide for Parents

Life-long learning, community and friendship

Learning Without Limits

Really great learning is at the heart of what we do here at Kingshill Church School and we call this 'Learning Without Limits'. This means that Everybody is committed to working together to challenge ourselves with all that we do. The rainbow is our symbol for this, it means wonder, excitement and hope.

The children are keen to learn, they love being challenged and know that hard work and effort, along with lots of practice of skills they have been taught, will help them to improve their capabilities in learning new skills and knowledge.

We need you as parents to help and support us in this. Studies show that when parents engage and get involved with their child's learning it really helps! Children love it when their parents show a real interest in what they do at school.

So how can you help? Here are some ideas...

- Talk to your child about what they are learning at school. When he/she comes home, rather than ask 'Did you have a good day?' or 'What did you do at school today?' Try asking 'What did you learn today?' 'What was challenging today?' 'What was exciting today?' This will lead to a good conversation.
- Take a real interest in their home learning - do it with them, not for them- no matter how much they may moan! Set up a times tables challenge for them, play games with their spelling words, encourage them to be creative when they have a project to do. Agree that it is hard work - but that's OK!
- Encourage your child to read! In this age of technology that's hard, but reading is so important. Children who don't read find it very hard to write well.
- Help your child to see that making mistakes is good! We learn from our mistakes and it's OK to find things tricky - that's how our brains grow.
- Learn something new yourself! Show your child that you too can learn and that you too are willing to work hard and practice. Maybe start a new sport, a new hobby. If you can do it with your child then even better! Maybe put a rainbow picture up at home as a reminder to the whole family that Learning Without Limits is for home too!
